[For the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization statement of organization, see the Code of Federal Regulations, Title 32, Part 388]

The Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO) (formerly the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization) was established to develop ballistic and cruise missile defense systems that are capable of providing a limited defense of the United States and a flexible, interoperable family of theater missile defense systems that may be forward deployed to protect elements of the U.S. Armed Forces and allies of the United States. BMDO is under the authority, direction, and control of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics.

BMDO's mission is to manage and direct DOD's ballistic missile defense acquisition programs, which include theater missile defense, and to develop and deploy, if directed, a national missile defense program designed to protect the United States from a longrange missile threat posed by rogue nations. It is responsible for the continuing research and development of technologies that are relevant for long-term ballistic missile defense.

The Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA) was established in 1998 by the consolidation of selected elements of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Defense Special Weapons Agency, the On-Site Inspection Agency, and the Defense Technology Security Administration. DTRA is under the authority, direction, and control of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. It is responsible for threat reduction to the United States and its allies from weapons of mass destruction and prevention of future threats. Through the execution of technology security activities, cooperative threat reduction programs, arms control treaty monitoring and onsite inspection, force protection, and counterproliferation, DTRA supports nuclear stockpile stewardship and technical support for nuclear weapons in DOD custody. DTRA reviews licenses for the export of U.S. technologies that could be used in the production of delivery of weapons of mass destruction or conventional weapons in order to ensure that the transfers are consistent with U.S. national security interests. It also implements the Cooperative Threat Reduction Program, which assists former Soviet Union countries in reducing their weapons of mass destruction infrastructure.

Dean, School of Medicine Dean, Graduate School of Nursing VAL G. HEMMING FAYE G. ABDELLAH

Authorized by act of September 21, 1972 (10 U.S.C. 2112), the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences was established to educate career-oriented medical officers for the Military Departments and the Public Health Service. The University currently incorporates the F. Edward Hebert School of Medicine (including graduate and continuing education programs) and the Graduate School of Nursing.

Students are selected by procedures recommended by the Board of Regents and prescribed by the Secretary of Defense. The actual selection is carried out by a faculty committee on admissions and is based upon motivation and dedication to a career in the uniformed services and an overall appraisal of the personal and intellectual characteristics of the candidates without regard to sex, race, religion, or national origin. Applicants must be U.S. citizens.

Medical school matriculants will be commissioned officers in one of the uniformed services. They must meet the physical and personal qualifications for such a commission and must give evidence of a strong commitment to serving as a uniformed medical officer. The graduating medical student is required to serve a period of obligation of not less than 7 years, excluding graduate medical education.

Students of the Graduate School of Nursing must be commissioned officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Public Health Service prior to application. Graduate nursing students must serve a commitment determined by their respective service.
